

Jennifer

Silvera BIO

Be Here Now!

In September of 2005, Jennifer Silvera opened her front door to three uniformed police officers delivering a devastating message: her husband, Officer Shawn Silvera, had been killed in the line of duty. With two young children, the shattering news began a journey of grief, hope and ultimately healing.

From this place of tragic loss, followed by unimaginable grace, love and ongoing restoration, Jennifer brings her message of encouragement. Her writing has inspired thousands and her speaking has received heartfelt applause in corporate settings, from church groups, and among community organizations.

Jennifer's background includes a degree in Family Studies and professional work as an HR Director for Hilton Hotels before entering the Peace Corps with her husband. Here they served for two years in a small Honduran village assisting with computer education and clean water projects.

Jennifer explains, "We are called to live a life of significance; to live less selfishly, love more blindly, and confidently step by faith into a life of abundant possibility."

Jennifer's Speaking Topics:

- Be Here Now-
Live the Importance of Today
- Present Parenting-
Living Now with your Kids
- Making Marriage Matter-
Loving in the Moment
- The Journal Method-
Experiencing Vision and Purpose through Writing

What Others Are Saying...

"For anyone who has ever been heartbroken, Jennifer meets you there. And gently and effectively points the way towards healing."
-Jeannie Burlowski, Communication Consultant/Mom of Two

"A brilliant speaker and writer, she has the ability to touch the heart and connect the mind."
-Ericka Heid, HR Senior Professional/United Properties

"With a powerful, essential, life-changing message, she is a bright light in a sorrow-weary world."
-Trish Van Pilsum, Investigative Reporter/FOX9 News

For More Information on Booking Jennifer for Your Next Event Or to Learn More of her Story and Read her Writings go to:
www.believenow.com or email: info@believenow.com